

Supporting STUDENTS EXPERIENCING AN EATING DISORDER

Empowering schools to support recovery

School staff can find it challenging to know what to do to support a student experiencing an eating disorder and what they can do for their wider school community (staff and students). However, schools can play an incredibly important role in the recovery of a student, particularly when they are returning from inpatient care or engaged in intensive outpatient treatment.

As the needs of each student may differ below is some helpful information to help guide your key staff. Should you require further support in relation to a student please contact the Butterfly National Helpline.

ESTABLISH A TEAM

Establish the support team to determine the needs of the student in the school environment; key staff (Wellbeing, School Counsellor &/or year level co-ordinator, Principal), parents, key person involved in treatment (will vary with each case) and if age-appropriate, the student.

BE INFORMED

Understand Eating Disorders; relevant staff need an appropriate understanding of the eating disorder the student is experiencing and its effect. The student's treatment team can inform on this and for broader understating about eating disorders please visit the National Eating Disorder Collaboration www.nedc.com.au
