

Contact the Butterfly Collective to consult, collaborate and co-create with people with lived experience of eating disorders

Are you looking to engage with or work alongside people with living and lived experience of body image concerns or an eating disorder?

Would you like to embed lived experience expertise and leadership into your project?

You are invited to engage with Australia's largest eating disorder lived experience network, the Butterfly Collective, to inform, influence and create change within eating disorder education, prevention, treatment and care.

Collective members have contributed to over 130 opportunities across policy, advocacy, research, campaigns, co-design and co-production, service and resource design, and evaluation across the eating disorder and broader mental health sector.

"Since engaging with various opportunities through the Butterfly Collective, I feel more confident in the value of my lived experience and the wisdom gained through that, as well as in the potential to help and support others by using my lived experience"

- Kacey,
Butterfly Collective member

If you are ready to make a difference by engaging with the Butterfly Collective, then you can contact the butterflycollective@butterfly.org.au

